ENERGY-SAVING HOME IMPROVEMENTS CAN CUT YOUR TAXES

Thinking about your taxes?

Investing in a renewable energy system, such as solar hot water heaters, geothermal heat pumps, and wind energy systems no longer include a tax credit dollar limit. The tax credit, which is available through 2016, is up to 30% of the cost, including both labor and materials. Your primary residence, second home, and any rental properties you own are all eligible for this credit.

If you've been thinking of upgrading the energy efficiency of your home, this may be the time to do it while saving on your taxes. Contact your accountant or tax advisor for details.

2010 - THE YEAR TO GET OUT OF DEBT!

If it seems like you've always been in debt and there's just no way to get out, take heart: there is a solution.

Can you imagine a life without debt? A life where you're not paying for yesterday's expenses, but instead can use everything you earn for today... and possibly put something away for tomorrow too?

Make sure you differentiate between collateralized debt (home loans, auto loans, etc.) and uncollateralized (consumer) debt, such as credit cards. Most collateralized debt is fine, (provided you are buying a car or home you can afford) and may be difficult to do without. Consumer debt can be avoided in most cases, although that's easier said than done.

The first step is to stop taking on more debt. No more buying things you don't have the money for right now. Trade in your credit card for your debit card.

The second step is designating 20% of all income to pay down your consumer debt. Consumer debt is that loan on the fridge. It's also the credit cards and store charge cards weighing down your wallet. Saving 20% means you will be living off 80% of your income until everything is paid off. It would be wonderful if you could put another five or ten percent away in a savings account so that, should an emergency arise, you'll have the funds to get you through without having to borrow again.

One-hundred years ago, no one had a credit card. While credit was available for specific purposes, it wasn't nearly as wide-spread as it is today. Rare is the family in today's world carrying no consumer debt.

While a debit card can solve the first step, the second one requires a shift in priorities and a determination to pay down your consumer debt. Try it and you'll find that there's less stress and more enjoyment in the things you do have when you avoid debt as much as you possibly can. If you feel you need a credit card, stick with one, and make sure it has the lowest interest rate and the best possible terms.

Come into the credit union and see what we have to offer. There may be options that will help speed up the process. It might take awhile to pay your debt off, but if you stick to a plan, you'll get it done... and you'll be debt-free.
